FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

How fit do I have to be to take part?

- You should have a moderate to good level of fitness and be comfortable riding for several hours a day on gravel roads. Previous multi-day riding experience is helpful, but not essential if you're prepared.

What type of bike do I need?

- A gravel bike or mountain bike is recommended. Your bike should be well-serviced, with suitable tyres for mixed terrain and long-distance comfort.

Do I carry my own luggage?

- No — your luggage is transported between accommodation stops. You'll only need to carry essentials for the day (water, snacks, tools, etc.).

Is mechanical support available?

- Yes, there is usually a support vehicle and guide on the tour to assist with basic repairs and any issues along the route.

Are meals included?

- All Daily Meals – breakfast, lunch and dinner – are included. Meals begin from Lunch on arrival day until breakfast on departure day.

What about water and nutrition on the bike?

- Water and fuelling stops are set up along the route, and made available before the ride so that riders can carry their own hydration and energy snacks for each day.

What happens in bad weather?

- Tours run in most weather conditions, but guides will adjust routes or logistics if needed to ensure safety and enjoyment.

Is the tour safe?

- Yes — routes are carefully planned, and guides are experienced. However, as with any outdoor activity, participants should be aware of basic cycling safety and personal responsibility. Our support Team can offer Basic First Aid.

How do I book or secure a spot?

- Spaces are limited, so it's best to book early. Complete our Booking Form and pay a deposit to confirm your place on the tour.
